In 1862, the Dakota went to war against the United States following two years of unfulfilled treaty obligations, including the failure to make payment on lands and provide health care or food. After the war, many Dakota were forced to flee their homelands along the Mnísota Wakpá ("clear water river" - Minnesota River).

This month, the state of Minnesota has returned 114 acres of land along the Mnisota to the Lower Sioux Dakota tribe. It's a historic place where the 1862 Dakota War began.

"Our ancestors paid for this land over and over with their blood, with their lives. It's not a sale; it's been paid for by the ones that aren't here anymore." - Robert Larsen (Lower Sioux) source

Today I had my favourite ever unsolicited queer comment. I was holding hands with my girlfriend when a middle aged woman with very little English approached us. She smiled, nodded approvingly and said:

"Men is too headache."

Reporting an abuser doesn't ruin their life. They did that themselves.

Reporting an abuser doesn't damage their reputation. It makes it more accurate.

Reporting an abuser doesn't hurt their family. It protects them from abuse.

Reporting an abuser isn't gossip. It's integrity.

Let's celebrate the men & women who were bullied & sprayed & abused fighting for equality, but aren't in history books

Men who slam doors and furniture are making sure you hear how much they want to hit you.

pay attention to the seeds of domestic violence.
please. you really deserve better

beyonceprivilege

Not seeds of domestic violence, no. If your partner is slamming things, punching things, breaking things etc in anger that is directed at you that is ALREADY DOMESTIC VIOLENCE. Domestic violence is not always battery to your person. Your partner punching a wall or breaking a plate is still an act of physical intimidation that is included under the legal definition of what constitutes DV. If your partner is intimidating you or threatening you they are already abusing you.

What you need to know about
Internal Condoms

What is it?

The internal condom is a small plastic pouch that anyone can use, regardless of gender identity or sexual orientation, inside the vagina or anus to help prevent pregnancy and/or STDs.

How do you use it?

Squeeze together the ring at the closed end of the condom and slide it into your body like a tampon. Let the outer ring hang about an inch outside the body.

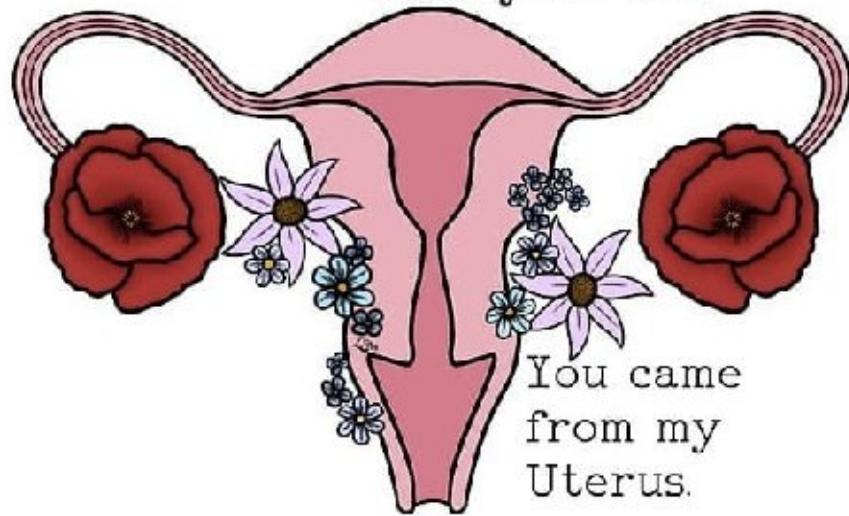

How do you use it?

For anal sex, remove the inner ring and insert the condom into your anus with your finger, leaving the outer ring hanging out.

Anyone can use an internal condom, regardless of gender identity or sexual orientation. The internal condom goes inside the vagina or the anus to help prevent pregnancy and/or STDs. Learn more: <https://p.pfpa.org/3rSc33B> source

Hi rain I'm scared and I won't have my Instagram after today and I just want someone to know I exist as me. Jamie the boy.

Hello Jamie! I am so happy to have You here. I love You so much.

Why won't You have IG later is everything alright?

Thanks for writing my name I knew you would do that. Thank you

Ok so my parents both are both Trump Qanon type people and my dad told me he doesn't want any of us in my family having social media accounts except for

Ok so my parents both are both Trump Qanon type people and my dad told me he doesn't want any of us in my family having social media accounts except for email for school and that is all. He said when he comes home tonight he is taking all of us off the internet and deleting our accounts and I have parent stuff on my phone so they see what I use online.

That was a lot sorry

Jamie don't apologize it's ok! I'm grateful You shared all this thank You. I'm honored to be shared with.

What can I do to support?

Thanks so much. Wow

Can you share something from me on your platform? It's

Can you share something from me on your platform? It's understandable people are happy Trump lost but my parents are really mad about it and I have to deal with that anger and the more people are mean about Trump losing the madder they get. I know lots of trans/enby and other people are out there like me and we are trapped at home with angry parents and we can't leave. And it's scary. Can you just share with your platform that Jamie exists and Jamie is asking for compassion? Can people please think of me and my friends before they say whatever salty thing they want to say to people like my parents? We are literal collateral. Please share that.

Jamie- this was a very powerful thing to say and write. I will absolutely share it with Our platform. (It's Ours because I wouldn't have it without You or Them.) Compassion is difficult these days for many who have been so hurt- a lot of people feel good saying what first comes to their mind because the freedom to say something out loud (even if intense or angry) is almost therapeutic in itself. Some people also feel the hard line is the only line to be drawn.

Being reminded of the privilege we have when we address people online and get to Block or Mute them to avoid the repercussions of their anger is important. While we may block or mute them- their family, friends and immediate community can not and it results in innocent people taking the brunt of punishment from our point being made.

People push back when they're called "privileged" because once you acknowledge your privilege, there is an implicit responsibility to use it to help those who don't enjoy equal or fair treatment.

There's also resistance to being told how privilege positions you as a beneficiary of systems of oppression, whether or not you yourself think you personally "oppress" people.

So "I'm not privileged" is another way of saying "I'm not responsible or culpable for your lack of equal treatment." It's a head-in-the-sand reaction.
