Anti-Racist Lit. Biographies, Non-Fiction Novels, Personal Narratives

I've been getting a lot of questions from my non-Black friends about how to be a better ally to Black people. I suggest unlearning and relearning through literature as just one good jumping off point, and have broken up my anti-racist reading

Marsha P. Johnson was a black trans woman who was known for throwing the first brick in the 1969 Stonewall riots. She spent much of her life fighting for equality and was one of the spearheads for the early gay liberation movements before she was murdered. REMEMBER HER. source

I do things every day without fear, because I am privileged, and I am privileged every day because I am white.

Being not racist is not enough, we must be anti racist.

Social change is enacted when a society mobilizes.

I stand in solidarity with all of those protesting. source

these were their last words. THEY DESERVE JUSTICE source

Fuck, and I cannot stress enough, the police.

just a reminder since pride month is coming up: the first gay pride was a riot. the first gay pride was anti cop. the first gay pride was started by Black trans women & Black drag queens. there is no lgbt liberation without Black liberation, and cops do not belong in our spaces. source

one nude leak and a woman's reputation could potentially be destroyed but men could have a whole ass rape allegation and still be the president of the US.. never do I wanna hear y'all argue that gender inequality doesn't exist source

Philadelphia right now. source

I've never seen such a terrifying and extremely relevant tiktok video. THIS is how u use big social media platforms #BlackLivesMatters source

Telling a Black man to respect cops to avoid being killed is the same as telling a woman to dress appropriately to avoid being raped source
